AFT members fight and show up: The Supreme Court

While we believe in a fair and balanced court system, the extremists are celebrating President Trump's latest Supreme Court nominee—Judge Brett Kavanaugh.

Kavanaugh not only has a long history of siding with corporations when workers try to stand up for themselves, he's also stood with CEOs when they wanted to discriminate against their employees, fire their workers unfairly, or infringe on the health and safety of consumers. And now, he wants to turn a blind eye to President Trump's lawless behavior. He's written that presidents shouldn't be indicted or subject to investigation.

He thinks the Consumer Financial Protection Bureau is unconstitutional. He's a huge proponent of school choice. He's against affirmative action. Educators and other working people have given us a clear mandate to oppose this nominee and fight like hell to make sure the people's voices are heard in this process.

Kavanaugh is a very real, very serious threat to our values.

A crucial part of this fight is doing what you do best—educating others about what is at stake—and we have tools here to help you do that.

But another important piece of this fight is showing up. There will be events across the country in the coming weeks that you can join. And if you want to start something yourself, it's as easy as registering it online.

Kavanaugh may want Donald Trump to go unchecked, but we won't let his confirmation process go unchecked. We have heard from thousands of you that you are ready to fight this extreme appointment, to protect the integrity of our courts and make sure we don't gut American rights and freedoms. Join us to fight for equality, healthcare, fairness, public education, voting and expanding rights for all.
